

The Heat
by Thomas H.

You heat the water
When you make tea.
But we wanted it hotter
For liberty.
So we tossed the tea
Into the sea
And added our own heat,
Our fire.
So that taste of power
Would never expire,
Would last and last beyond the hour
And burn in hearts we'd yet to meet.
You made the tea.
We made the heat.